YR03: Youth Leadership in Sustainable Soil Management

The FAO Regional Office for Asia and the Pacific invites you to join a regional youth forum titled “Youth Leadership in Sustainable Soil Management” to be held on Wednesday, 16 October 2024 at 14.00 (GMT+7) via Zoom.

Organized as part of the World Food Forum, this regional event will focus on the pivotal role of youth in preserving and enhancing soil health through sustainable soil management practices, ultimately driving a transformative shift in agrifood systems. This session also explores the critical role of education in fostering the future generation of farmers and innovators, as well as strategies to bridge generational divides and maximize the agricultural potential of youth by embracing technology and fostering innovation.

In 2024 the World Food Forum Global Youth Action—a youth-led movement and network to transform our agrifood systems—is committed to the theme: “Good food for all, for today and tomorrow”.

YOUTH FROM ASIA-PACIFIC

The Asia-Pacific region is home to over 600 million youth aged 15-24 years, and unlocking their potential is crucial for the future of sustainable agriculture and soil management. This satellite event aims to showcase and identify innovative solutions, best practices, and local experiences from the Asian region that stakeholders can leverage to build a better food future. It fosters inclusive dialogue and collaboration among stakeholders from diverse backgrounds and generations, raising awareness about the critical role of youth leadership in sustainable soil management for food security, nutrition, and the transformation of agrifood systems.
